

Grant for young artists to flourish

Jeff Martin, the co-founder of the studios, worked closely with Sandra Bardas.

THE doors of the Appleton Street Studios in Melbourne, where the late Sandra Bardas once lived and breathed art, are opening for new and emerging artists with the announcement of the Sandra Bardas Studio Grant.

The grant aims to encourage and support up-and-coming artists aged 30 and under to realise their dreams, as well as promote the importance of a professional studio environment to young artists.

The winner will receive access to the Sandra Bardas studio located within the Appleton Street Studios for 12 months, commencing the following January of each year. In addition, there will be a supplement of $5000 worth of art materials, relevant to the winner's practice, provided for their use.

Applications can be downloaded from August 1 and must be received by 5pm on September 1. Enquiries: www.appletonstreetstudios.com.
